Food & Wine 2024 Global Tastemakers

10 Top US Hotels for Food and Drinks, According to the Experts

Rural properties with on-site farms and activities are winning over culinary-driven travelers while a few city stays stand out.

The best part of having easy access to quality food, drink, and accommodations under one roof is flexibility. At hotels with inviting cafes, restaurants, and bars, you don't have to venture far for a memorable drink or meal.

Among the second annual Global Tastemakers list of the best U.S. hotels for food and drink, you'll find a nice balance of accommodations between metropolitan and more rural, scenic settings. California claimed some spots initially occupied by Las Vegas, while a luxurious, culinary-focused East Tennessee resort that's adored by Americans and jet-setters from all over the world took the top spot.

With nearly two dozen guest rooms and suites, eight treehouses set 20 feet off the ground, and over 300 forested acres, this all-inclusive haven in Vermont capitalizes on New England's outdoor charms. The hotel hosts activities such as fly fishing, kayaking, and snowshoeing, perfect for experiencing the best of what the property has to offer. But it's chef Nathan Rich's hyper-local ethos – resort hives provide honey, while beef and pork are sourced within a 40-mile radius – that has regulars booking stays at Twin Farms year after year.
